In 2017, I embarked on a 100,000-mile journey across the United States. I wanted to see the country up close, to meet its people, and to experience its culture. I drove through all 50 states, visiting cities and towns, farms and factories, schools and churches. I met people from all walks of life, from the homeless to the wealthy, from the young to the old. I learned about their hopes and dreams, their fears and struggles. And I came to see America in a whole new light.

My journey was not without its challenges. I faced bad weather, car trouble, and even a few close calls. But I also experienced some of the most amazing moments of my life. I saw the beauty of the country's landscapes, from the towering mountains of the West to the rolling hills of the Midwest. I met people who were kind, generous, and welcoming. And I learned that America is a country of resilience, hope, and opportunity.

I wrote this book to share my experiences with you. I want you to see the America that I saw, the America that is full of possibility and promise. I want you to meet the people that I met, the people who are making a difference in their communities. And I want you to fall in love with this country as much as I did.

This book is a love letter to America. It is a celebration of the country's people, places, and culture. It is a reminder that we are all Americans, and that we are all in this together.
