Moore's journey begins in the capital city of Cotonou, a bustling metropolis with a vibrant street life and a rich colonial history. From Cotonou, Moore travels to the ancient city of Abomey, the former capital of the Kingdom of Dahomey. Abomey is home to a number of UNESCO World Heritage sites, including the Royal Palaces of Abomey, which are a testament to the kingdom's power and wealth.

Moore also visits the Pendjari National Park, one of the largest and most important national parks in West Africa. Pendjari is home to a wide variety of wildlife, including elephants, lions, leopards, and buffaloes. Moore spends several days exploring the park, and he has some amazing encounters with the animals.

In addition to his travels to the major cities and tourist attractions, Moore also ventures off the beaten path to explore some of Benin's hidden gems. He visits the village of Ganvie, a floating village built on stilts in Lake Nokoué. He also visits the sacred forest of Ouidah, a UNESCO World Heritage site that is said to be the birthplace of voodoo.

Moore's journey is an inspiring and unforgettable one. He paints a vivid picture of Benin, a country that is rich in culture, history, and natural beauty. Country Jumper In Benin is a must-read for anyone who is interested in travel, adventure, or West Africa.
