The immigrant started out by working at a low-paying job. He worked long hours, often seven days a week. But he never complained, and he always did his best. He knew that if he wanted to succeed in America, he had to be willing to work hard.

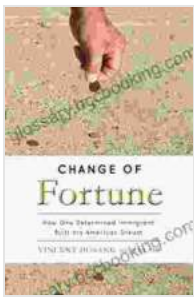

After a few years, the immigrant had saved enough money to start his own business. He opened a small store, and he worked hard to make it a success. He was always willing to go the extra mile, and he always put his customers first. As a result, his business flourished.
