Red at the Bone is a critically acclaimed novel by Jacqueline Woodson that has captured the hearts of readers worldwide. This powerful and evocative story explores the complexities of race, family, and the enduring bonds that connect us.

The novel follows the lives of two families, the Cliftons and the Gordons, as they navigate the challenges of life in a racially divided society. The Cliftons are a wealthy African American family who have long been plagued by secrets and unspoken tensions. The Gordons are a working-class white family who are struggling to make ends meet.

The lives of these two families intersect when Iris, a young woman from the Clifton family, falls in love with Jerome, a young man from the Gordon family. Their love affair is met with disapproval from both sides of their families, but Iris and Jerome are determined to be together.

As Iris and Jerome build a life together, they are faced with numerous challenges, including racism, poverty, and the disapproval of their families. But through it all, they remain committed to each other and to their love.

Red at the Bone is a beautifully written and emotionally resonant novel that explores the complex and often painful realities of race and family in America. Woodson's lyrical prose and unforgettable characters will stay with you long after you finish reading the book.

This novel has earned numerous accolades, including the National Book Award for Fiction and the Anisfield-Wolf Book Award. It has also been praised by critics and readers alike for its powerful storytelling and its insightful exploration of race and family.
