He unravels the complexities of substance and essence, examining how philosophers have sought to understand the underlying structure of the world.

Carpio challenges the reader to question the foundations of their own knowledge, engaging with the works of Descartes, Hume, and Kant.

This chapter also explores the limits of human knowledge, examining the skepticism of Pyrrho and the anti-realism of postmodern philosophers. Carpio argues that while our knowledge is always imperfect, it is nonetheless essential for understanding the world and making informed decisions.
